INDIA-ASEAN RELATIONS: FROM 'LOOK' TO 'ACT' EAST POLICY

Prof. Swaran Singh

India's Republic Day celebrations this year witnessed a spectacle of having ten chief guests. Only twice in its post-independence history, India's Republic Day celebrations had seen two compared to usual one foreign leader as chief guest. This time round, however, national leaders of all the ten members of Association of South East Asian Nations (ASEAN) visited New Delhi to participate in a commemorative India-ASEAN summit marking 25 years of their Dialogue Partnership and this was followed by all of them together joining the President of India at the Republic Day parade that showcases India's military might and cultural diversity -- both of which have since emerged as defining pillars of India's growing integration with these nations.

Last 25 years of India's Look East Policy has been one celebrated component of India's foreign policy since it was enunciated in 1992 by prime minister Narasimha Rao. It was part of global structural changes following the collapse of former Soviet Union that Rao had sought to connect his opening up of India's economy with building closer ties towards these tiger economies of Southeast Asia. The 1990s was the decade that also saw expansion of ASEAN from six to ten members. Addition of Cambodia, Laos, Myanmar and Vietnam thus were to bring ASEAN closer to share long land borders with India's sensitive northeastern region. Compared to original six ASEAN members whose economies were much advanced, these new members were less developed. This was to open new opportunities for India's investments, technology and skill transfers through training and education making it an influential player in ASEAN seeking to handhold these new members' development process. At the same time, building closer physical connectivity between ASEAN and India's northeastern states was expected to inject development in this restive region and help India resolve their persistent political turmoil as well. This was to make their engagements complimentary and of mutual benefit.

The New Context

It is in this relative ease of doing business and flourish in India's engagements with Southeast Asia, rise of assertive China was to become another important driver for their friendship. Debates on the need for India to move over from 'Look' to 'Act' East had been triggered primarily from the 2011 Hyderabad speech of the U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Clinton. However it was for Prime Minister Narendra Modi

HOW TO FACE UPSC CIVIL SERVICES INTERVIEW

Sanjay Kumar

And the countdown begins !!!

On the basis of the results of the Civil Services (Main) Examination, 2017 held by the Union Public Service Commission from 28th October, 2017 to 3rd November, 2017, 2568 candidates against the tentative vacancies of 980 officers have been selected for Personality Test for selection to the IAS, IPS and other allied services.

Personality Test of these candidates is likely to commence from 19th Feb, 2018. Personality Tests will be held in the Office of the Union Public Service Commission at Dholpur House, Shahjahan Road, New Delhi-110069.

The Union Public Service Commission (UPSC) Civil Services examination is considered to be one of the toughest competitions in India.

With more than 5 lakh candidates struggling for merely 980 seats, the whole process of selection in UPSC involves the preliminary, main examinations and the interview (personality test).

The personality test or the interview in civil services examination is the final hurdle to cross and then there is smile for rest of the lives. The personality test carries 275 marks out of the total 2025 mark of the Civil Services Examination based on which the final selection list is prepared.

The success and rank of an aspirant is determined significantly by this small but important segment. It has a great scoring potential. Process of just 25 to 35 minutes and marks scored has a wide range from low 2 digit figure to as high as 220.

But candidates do not consider the importance of interview and even if they consider, they are not able to give right direction to their preparation in absence of appropriate viewpoint. In fact they take it in light spirit. But when rightly handled prepared, it is surely the easiest and the most rewarding experience. Let us make its preparation most interesting one:

- Honesty and integrity,
- Logical argument,
- Balance of opinion,
- Leadership skills,
- Mental alertness and responsiveness
- Variety and depth of interest
- Patience
- Acumen, your views on varied topics.

HOW TO FACE

ways. First-- They will never feel surprised or awkward even if they face any unexpected question from the interviewers. Second, when they have prepared themselves fully, they develop confidence within them. And with this confidence, they can ensure much better rank defining interview score than they could have without any guidance. Therefore it is very important not to lose time.

Here are some preparation tips to be followed:

Know yourself

Try to know the different aspects of your personality, even hidden or unknown. If any of your personality traits does not suit an IAS officer, try to overcome that weakness.

Read and revise your bio-data many times

Most of the questions in UPSC interview will be based on the bio-data of the candidates. Their Detailed Application Form (DAF) includes the following points with probable questions given therein:

- Home State and places etc.
- Schools, Colleges, Places of Schooling.
- Mother's and Father's profession.
- Their own previous professions/jobs and organisation, if any.
- Date of Birth, Meaning of Name, any specific District and Place of birth : Special features, peculiarities, typical problems, famous persons special occasion that coincides with the Date and Year.
- Hobbies : Be honest. No manufactured or cooked up hobby.
- Awards and any extra-curricular activities : Be honest. Do not cook up.
- Reasons for a long time gap after graduation without employment, if any.

- Optional Subjects, Subject of graduation : general questions of applied nature like how the subject or a concept helps in administration or in real life etc.
- Preferences for services : justification for the same, especially when it is unusual. E.g. why IPS and not IAS or IFS?
- Revised Order of preferences for services : justification for the same.

Thus prepare well for questions from areas like hobbies, education, work experience, service-preference etc.

Beginning of the interview

When your turn for the interview comes, you will be called by the interviewers. A person who has been given the responsibility of calling the candidates will inform you. On this call, collect all your materials and proceed towards the interview room. If the door of the room is open, ask the permission from the interviewers by asking gently, "May I come in sir?" enter the room only after the permission is granted. This permission may be either verbal (through words) or gesture (through indication). Walk confidently to the seat meant for the interviewee and wish the interviewers by saying "Good morning madam/sir", or "Good afternoon" as the case may be. In most of the cases, one of the interviewers says the candidate to occupy the seat. In some cases, the interviewers wish to test the etiquette and manner of an interviewee and delay deliberately in saying her/him to occupy the seat. If this happens with you, ask gently to occupy the seat. After you occupy the seat the interview will begin.

First Impression

There is a famous saying-- "First impression is the last impression". Therefore it is essential to create a good impression in the mind of the interviewers. It's not so tough. You just have to walk very confidently from the door to the chair in proper manner. Sit on the chair only after taking due permission and maintain proper eye contact with the interviewer who is asking question.

Body language

Body language is part and parcel of oral communication. In fact, our body language speaks much earlier than our words. Therefore, understanding of how you can reinforce your spoken words through your body language is very important. Body language consists of gestures, postures, and facial expressions by which a person manifests various physical, mental, and emotional states and communicates non-verbally (without using any word) with others. So it is essential to maintain an appropriate body language through the interview process.

Communication skill

Communication skill is one's ability to express one's views and listen to other's views effectively. The first rule is to be a good listener. It is not found frequently in practice. You should be very careful in choosing the words in whatever language you happen to speak on, as couple of words here and there and the meanings change. So always speak your minimal, try to be as precise as you can but at the same time be clear in your thought and exposition.

Don't lie

Don't cook up and never create fake facts in your bio-data. Very often they will catch you as member of the UPSC boards are well read and experienced people.

Problem solving skill

Problem-solving skills are relevant for evolving solutions to a problem or set of problems. A problem is a gap between desired result and actual state of affair at a particular point of time. In order to overcome this gap, relevant action is required. For identifying this action, problem-solving skills are required. For example, if you are talking about status of women in India, classify this issue in to rural women and urban women and then think in terms of their socio-political and economic status. This is how you can develop your problem solving skills.

Be precise and to-the-point

Master the art of giving precise and to-the-point answers. You can make your answers crispy and interesting. Your views should be balanced and impartial. You may take a stand rather than giving a sweeping generalization. This is how you can make answer precise and to the point.

Discuss but do not argue and admit your mistake

It is always better to treat an interview as a discussion forum. Discussion involves deliberating on issues that may emerge from a question. In order to sort out the issues, it is possible that there may be questions over questions, particularly in an in-depth interview. You gently say about your reservation on the issue being discussed. If the interviewer does not agree with your view and still persists on her earlier stand, it is better not to drag this discussion to prove the interviewer wrong.

Moreover, being a human being you may make mistakes. If you do so and the interviewer points out it, feel free to accept your mistake. You may offer an apology and be polite throughout the interview process.

Try to rehearse probable/standard questions

Frame maximum possible questions on your bio-data as well as on issues of current affairs. Give copies of your DAF to selected friends to prepare questions for you. Think and prepare your own answers.

Practice regularly: listening, thinking, summarizing and speaking. After reading/listening, think and connect with other topics. Next, internalize, summarize and form your own opinion.

For current events read, discuss, listen to Audio Visuals. T.V. discussions and Audio Visuals are very helpful and interesting. Some useful sources include RSTV, LSTV, BBC news, CNN, The Hindu newspaper and IDSA.

Now you can rehearse probable/standard questions (related to your bio-data and current affair issues) likely to be asked in the interview. This process will give you confidence as you will be able to eliminate any deficiency that you experience during this process.

Avoid common mistakes during interview

Some common mistakes may reduce your chances of being successful. You can follow the following guidelines to avoid such mistakes:

- Do not take your cell phone inside the interview room.
- Don't be nervous during the interview process.
- Avoid checking time by looking at your wrist watch during the interview process.
- Criticism of any type is taken as a negative approach and is not appreciated.
- Just keep the patience. They may check your mindfulness and patience during unfavorable and tough times. So take it in that spirit.
- Do not show that you are very much disparate for this career.
- If you happen to be not clear about any issue/question asked to you, confess it humbly with a smile saying 'I do not know sir'.

INDIA-ASEAN...

to announce this tectonic policy shift from 'Look' to 'Act' East during his debut participation at the 12th ASEAN Summit in Yangon (Myanmar) during September 2014. This was also part of his launching his hyperactive foreign policy of mega-events and action-driven hectic meetings with dozens of global leaders. So this can also be seen as result of prime minister Narendra Modi's visits to nine of these ten ASEAN nations -- some of them even twice -- that his personal rapport with each of these leaders made such a historic feat, of having them all as chief guests at 2018 Republic Day parade, possible. To the least this will be seen as a reset India-ASEAN relations by upping the ante for both sides.

From ASEAN side as well, such unprecedented gesture reflects their strong endorsement of India's ever widening and deepening of its strategic partnership with these Southeast Asian nations that both endorses and celebrates 'centrality' and 'legitimacy' of ASEAN on the driving seat of Asian relations. This centrality of ASEAN has been premised on its parleys not hurting core interests of any of the major powers. But rise of China has seen their turf war hotting up things for this region. In this new context, these growing synergies between India and ASEAN promise to become a catalyst for a gradual drift in discourses from their conventional Asia-Pacific geopolitics towards the newer Indo-Pacific frame of reference with India at its centre. There are already experts who project India trying to fill the vacuum created by rapidly shrinking regional leadership of the United States. ASEAN seems to welcome it such projections. Indeed since 1990s itself, ASEAN has sought to engage India as an alternative, if not a counterweight, to the unprecedented rise of China.

India, however, has evolved from its policy of nonalignment to multi-alignments so it has so far refused to bite the bait hedging all bets for confrontation with rising China. India's policy of multi-alignments seeks to engage as many nations on as many issues as possible, and this includes engaging China as well. In West Asia, for instance, we are friends with Saudi Arabia, Iran and United Arab Emirates but also with Israel. Same is true of East Asia where India has been closely engaged with Australia, Japan and China as also with Russia and ASEAN. But increasingly assertive China, especially in face of rapidly shrinking global leadership of the United States has pushed rest of Asia, especially India and ASEAN to follow the example set by European nations in asserting their autonomy from the United States in building regional balance of power to ensure where no single nation is able to flaunt established norms and institutions.

China's Economic Might

Unprecedented economic growth of China since early 1990s have coincided with

The Prime Minister, Shri Narendra Modi in a group photograph with the ASEAN Heads of State/Governments, at Rashtrapati Bhavan, in New Delhi on January 25, 2018.

India's increasing engagement with ASEAN. Indeed, starting from India's decision to become Dialogue Partner of ASEAN in 1992 its follow-up decisions of joining the ASEAN Regional Forum, initiating India-ASEAN summits, or becoming founding member of East Asia Summits have all been viewed as driven by China's increasing influence in this larger region. All ten ASEAN members today see China as their largest trading partner. China's economic might was first put in display during the East Asian financial crisis of 1997 when one-party ruled China proved much efficient to come to their rescue while all other major powers remained trailing behind. Today again China's incessant construction of artificial islands in disputed waters of South China Sea for ASEAN and China-Pakistan Economic Corridor for India seem to bring them closer together and ASEAN once again wishes India to play an assertive role in the region.

So just like the East Asian financial crisis of 1997, presence of all ten ASEAN national leaders at the 2018 Republic Day parade, therefore marks a historic inflection point the evolution of regional balance of power in this region. ASEAN was originally created in 1967 as part of US containment of China and to control spread of communism in general. Thirty years later financial crisis in ASEAN laid foundations of its major economic engagement with China. Therefore both may be desirous of this change yet this poses formidable challenges for both India and ASEAN. China's bilateral trade with ASEAN today stands at $450 billion and India, that currently has a trade of $70 billion with ASEAN, has now decided to take it to $200 billion by 2020 which also seems too ambitious. Even with the United States that till recently was the greatest influence in the region and voters of propping India as a major player in the region has trade with China that stands five times that of its trade with India. And now, President Xi Jinping's ambitious Belt and Road Initiatives seems all set to widen these asymmetries further.

China with a $12 trillion economy and a $4 trillion annual trade with $3.5 trillion foreign exchange reserves remains far too strong to India that stands little comparison with its $2.6 trillion economy and less than $1 trillion trade and about $400 million foreign exchange reserves. Politically as well, compared to China's one-party rule and rise of Xi Jinping as China's uncontested supreme leader, India's Westminster system of multiple political parties and diversity-driven federalism have come to be seen as cumbersome in making quick turnarounds. But this is exactly what explains the ongoing shift where India is trying to broad base its relations with ASEAN to front load its advantages over China. While India today seeks to strengthen strategic and economic cooperation with ASEAN, it wishes to locate these as also take these far beyond to emphasise on India's robust democracy and civilisational connect with Southeast Asian nations. This broad-based engagement of India and ASEAN promises to prove India's greatest advantage against China's economic prowess and commerce driven engagement of ASEAN.

Strengthening Norms and Institutions

Countering China's display of military and economic prowess, India also seeks today to strengthen rule of law that ensures that all states respect established norms and institutions. ASEAN today is not just the most institutionalised regional grouping across Asia, it is also the one most acceptable to major world powers who have stakes in peace and stability of this region. These dynamic economies of ASEAN are all democracies and seek to connect India for their democratic credentials. This can also be seen as result of incremental rise of India as also part of global power shift from Atlantic to the Pacific. India-ASEAN relations also present an example of drift from hard to soft power with C3 -- Culture, Commerce, Connectivity -- becoming the buzzword for their future collaborations. Neither India nor ASEAN are known for any territorial aggrandisement or for aggressive behaviour that sets them apart from China. But both sides so far have failed to address or redress their dichotomy of their continued engagement and discomfort with rising economic power of China. In the most recent episode of India's 73-day long military standoff at Doklam that saw India standing up to China, ASEAN was found wary of taking sides. Likewise, India has occasionally endorsed U.S. positions on ensuring freedom of navigation in the South China Sea yet has remained sensitive to China's harsh reactions.

Geo-Civilisational Links

But what gives hope for ensuring efficacy of India-ASEAN joint initiatives is the fact that they now seem to emphasise building their geo-strategic partnerships on their wider geo-civilisational connections. This promises to be both far more enduring and should be far more acceptable to all major world powers as also their populace that will provide domestic constituencies behind their leaders' initiatives. Both India and ASEAN have chosen to focus on highlighting their civilisational links that go back to ancient times and had thrived till the end of first millennium when Islam and later Christianity were to become a stronger influences. Ancient epic of Ramayana remains India's umbilical cord with each of these nations that have, over centuries, evolved their own versions yet Ramayana remain central to their cultures and everyday life. No doubt the commemorative India-Asian summit issued a special postal stamp on Ramayana on 25th June and New Delhi hosted a week-long Ramayana festival starting 20th January 2018. This festival showcased various versions of Ramayana performed by over 120 artists from these ten Southeast Asian nations.

Buddhism remains their equally strong connection. Prince Sidhartha was born in Lumbini in Nepal. But he attained enlightenment and Buddhism, therefore, was born at Gaya in India. Later, it was King Asoka the Great who popularised Buddhism across Asia, especially Southeast Asia. Today, Buddhism is State Religion in Cambodia and 95 percent of Thailand, 87 per cent of Myanmar, 33 per cent of Singapore, 20 per cent of Malaysia, 12 per cent of Vietnam population are Buddhists. But here again, last decade has seen China leading the World Buddhist Forum with biannual mega congregations. These were initiated in 2006 by China's president Hu Jintao but organised by China's current President Xi Jinping who was then Party Secretary in Zhejiang. India has also been making similar efforts but both India and ASEAN need to work together to ensure that China is not allowed to hijack this cultural discourse as well. Buddhists in China, especially in Tibet, have faced difficult times for their dissensions and even in China they have sustained their close connections with India. So in being a pious link in building inter-societal relations, Buddhism should not be allowed to become victim to complex inter-state equations.

Other than Buddhism, Indonesia and Malaysia respectively have 87 per cent and 61 per cent Muslim populations and the Philippines has 92 per cent Christian population yet given India's multicultural history and milieu they feel equally connected to India. Indeed, successive leaders of ASEAN's largest nation, Indonesia, have repeatedly underlined that while they may follow Islam as their religion and faith yet they remain culturally rooted to Indian traditions. India is home to world's second largest Muslim population and a large Christian population. This enduring Indian multicultural connect till date reflects itself in Southeast Asian languages, names, folklore, sculpture, architecture, songs and musical traditions. As late as 802AD King Jayavarman had united all Khmer groups to establish his Kingdom of Kambuja (today's Cambodia) and Angkorvat -- renovations of which has seen India's continued participation -- represents today perhaps the most apt symbol of their enduring close geo-civilisational connections.

The Way Forward

To conclude, therefore, it is this geo-civilisational connect of India and ASEAN that undergirds their geo-strategic partnerships. No doubt China also has had cultural connect with Southeast Asia but its Cultural Revolution had privileged ideological links over culture and recent past has witnessed China emphasising on its stronger commercial connections with ASEAN. This is partly what makes both India and ASEAN seem increasingly ill-at-ease with assertive China. And this is also what promises to keep India and ASEAN closer together. With exponential inclusion of technologies empowering common people inter-societal connections will become increasingly influential in determining state policies. And as India and ASEAN explore into their unique elements that will strengthen their synergies their democratic systems and connect with common people will stand out as their advantage to counter China's negative influence on their own national interest and aspirations. This is what explains their attempts to broad base India-ASEAN partnerships by backing their inter-state initiatives with inter-societal liaisons, people-to-people at all levels of skill building, trainings and information exchange. They today are seeking to compete China's sharp power with their peoples' smart power.

MSMEs: THE BACKBONE OF INDIAN ECONOMY

Lovey Chaudhary

MSMEs worldwide play a major role in propelling growth engine, sustaining livelihood and promoting equitable regional development. The MSME sector in India continues to prove remarkable resilience in the face of rambling global and domestic economies. Significance of MSMEs can be observed in the developing economies where this sector constitutes over 90% of total enterprises and greatly to industrial production, exports and employment generation. Thus, MSMEs play a key role in overall industrial economy of the country.

A distinctive feature of MSMEs is that a very large proportion of them are concentrated around likely 6000 clusters plus 1157 traditional industrial clusters, 3091 handicrafts clusters, and 563 handloom clusters. According to the assessments of the Ministry of MSME, Government of India, the sector generates around 100 million jobs through over 46 million units situated throughout the geographical expanse of the country.

MSMEs are no more shielded in the controlled economy; the competitive pressure of free market is riding high. MSMEs are transforming into a new business environment characterized by the emergence of national and global supply chains where they share a symbiotic relationship with hefty corporations.

The apparent innovative capacity of MSMEs around the world for boosting economic growth and development at regional, national and global levels cannot be overemphasized. With its dexterity and dynamism, the sector has shown venerable innovativeness and malleability to survive economic shocks, even of the gravest nature.

Besides the wide range of services provided by the sector, the sector is further engaged in the engineering of over 6,000 products ranging from traditional to hi-tech items. The Indian MSME sector offers maximum opportunities for both self-employment and wage-employment outside the agricultural sector and contributes in constructing an inclusive and sustainable society in numerous ways through making of non-farm livelihood at meagre cost, balanced regional development, gender and social balance, environmentally sustainable development, etc.

In framework of persistent uncertainty in the agriculture sector because of substantial dependence on rain-fed irrigation, an alternative power pack, unutilised, is micro, small and medium enterprises (MSMEs). As MSMEs are usually labour-intensive, they have the ability to create more jobs to furnish to a fresh demographic country like India. Further, in view of the on-going implications of climate change, it is necessary that the MSME sector is prepared to engage millions who may be rendered unemployed in the agriculture sector.

The MSME sector in India

claims of diversity in terms of its size, level of technology employed, range of products and services provided and target markets. MSME Tool Rooms have been credited to provide at least ten components that were used in India's Mangalyaan (Mars Orbiter Mission probe), the Indian Space Research Organization's (ISRO) most ambitious mission till date, which is the country's first inter-planetary space mission. The sector has also contributed vital inputs for other space satellites such as the Chandrayan. India's second moon mission, Chandrayaan II, set to be launched in 2016-17, will have a soft land over a wheeled robotic vehicle to explore the landing area. India seeks to launch other ambitious projects like a global sea traffic monitoring system and an earth observation satellite, in cooperation with the EU. The projects envisage noteworthy contributions and merging opportunities from the Indian MSME sector.

Many more rewarding opportunities can be tapped by Indian MSMEs in the foundry industry, electronics industry, chemicals, leather, textiles, agro and food processing, pharmaceuticals, transport and tourism industries, etc. The globalization of industries has gradually drawn SMEs into global value chains through diverse types of cross-border activities. Many magnates are recognizing the opportunities that this dawn ushers and gaining entrée to global markets has become a tactical mechanism for their advanced development. These chances have risen as a result of the regime's increased focus on the MSME sector, grander investments in research and development, technological upgradation, drive towards international alliances and dealings to boost competitiveness and impel growth.

In the case of prevailing as well as potential MSMEs, entrepreneurs face the problem of finance. The government and non-governmental organisations seek out to finance and earmark resources for MSMEs, but these resources often do not reach the targeted audience. The successful launch of the Jan DhanYojana (JDY) could be used to direct monetary resources to targeted MSMEs. Still, access to bank finance may be testing for some MSMEs, and so there is a need to consider various substitutes of finance.

In the case of Japan, the government has imposed a cap on interest rates on loans that a money lender extends to MSMEs. As money lenders continue to play an important role in India, it is worth considering whether money lenders could be brought under regulation now, given technological progress, as achieved in the case of Japan, and an interest cap be imposed for lending to MSMEs.

Micro, Small and Medium Enterprises constitute the backbone of an economy in maintaining an appreciable growth rate and in generating employment opportunities.

In India, commercial banks are mandated to lend to MSMEs. In such cases there is also a need to ensure that the public sector does not crowd out the private sector. Further, the manufacturing sector in India as defined in 2006 was Rs.10 crore, which was equivalent to $2.3 million then. Factoring for inflation, this figure stood at just Rs. 5.28 crore in 2016, or $0.8 million at the current exchange rate.

Preferably, the figure presently, taking into account inflation, should have been nearby Rs. 18.63 crore or $2.9 million, which is a major difference of Rs. 13.35 crore or $1.5 million.

This incongruity is a constraining for enterprises in this sector to mature and partake in the value chain. With such a bare investment ceiling, Indian MSMEs are both expanding laterally or engaging themselves at the lower end of the value chain.

The Government could boost the spread of the investment limits of MSMEs to house the technological needs of the sector.

MSMEs generally suffer from poor conduct by major banks. In some cases, mis-selling of financial products is a general complaint of entrepreneurs. This can take the shape of higher fee or interest rate, failure to explain exit costs, and sometimes threatening them with refusal to extend regular credit. Illustratively, weighted average lending rate of commercial banks, as reported in the RBI's latest AR, is the highest for MSMEs when compared with loans extended to agriculture, large industry and infrastructure. Therefore, the role of financial education is very important for MSMEs in assessing appropriate start-up finance and in empowering them to use financial products and services to manage risks and other business needs.

Globally, medium-size enterprises in the manufacturing industry vary by meaning. In China it is definite as those having investment ceiling of 300 million yuan (at the current price level $44 million); in Thailand it is with a ceiling on investment capital of up to 200 million Thai bahts ($6 million); and EU defines medium enterprises as those of having turnover of ₹50 million, which is approximately $58 million.

In contrast, the investment limits for medium enterprises in

This would permit the enterprises to endure as MSMEs while also empowering them to grow. Some expanses (such as EU and China) have kept the ceiling on investment for medium enterprises at high levels, cheering capital infusion, technology upgradation, quality improvement, export orientation and employment generation.

It is essential to review the investment limits every three to four years, factoring inflation. Since industrial operations are generally capital intensive, investment ceiling for SMEs should be reviewed every so often.

There should be a wide differentiation within the two broad categories - manufacturing and services, while outlining MSMEs. Within these comprehensive categories, each sector would have need of a different level and size of investments.

The need of the hour is to specify a classification which would study not only the capital employed, but also features such as turnover and number of people employed.
